1. Map it!

2. Color it!

3. Study it!

4. Bake it!

5. Play it!

1. Map it!

Across the Curriculum

Using a foam-backed, laminated or plain paper wall map of the world.

Mark locations on the maps when you run across them in other subject areas, such as history, science, literature, etc.

Use straight pins or "flags" on a foam-backed map.

Use dry-erase markers on a laminated map.

Use markers colored pencils on a paper map.

2. Color it!

On a Historical Map

Integrate geography with history easily using historical outline maps.

You don't need a separate geography program to learn geography. Just integrate it right into your favorite history curriculum.

Color and label blank, historical maps.

Coordinate maps with your history studies.

Use a wall map or globe for reference.

3. Study it!

Dig in Deeper!

Use a geography curriculum to learn more about a region of the world.

It's okay to take some time off another subject to focus on geography if the schedule is tight.

Choose from...

1. Short unit studies
2. Semester courses
3. Full year courses

4. Bake it!

The heart of a Culture

lies in the food, celebrations and traditions of its people.

Cook and eat your way to greater understanding.

Use a curriculum that includes recipes.

Unit studies often include recipes.

Find your own on the Internet.

5. Play it!

Games and Play...

The sneaky way to encourage learning.

Kids will spend a great deal of time playing. It is their way of understanding the world. Make it educational when possible.

Board and card games

Software, mobile apps
and internet games

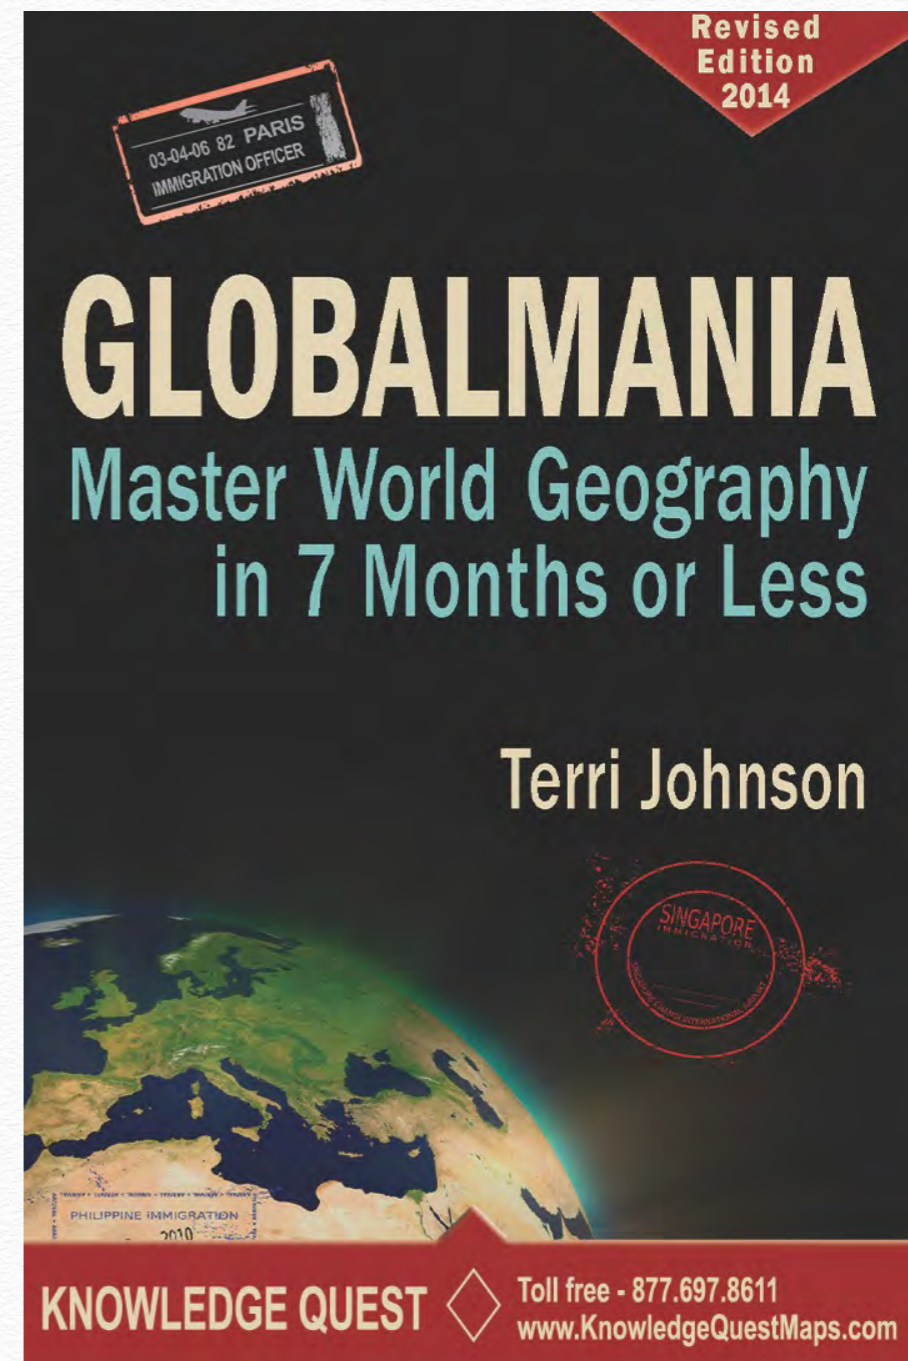

Books, quizzes, puzzles
